ANPS
APPOLLO NATIONAL PUBLIC SCHOOL

Education, at its truest, is about nurturing understanding, curiosity, compassion, and growth in every child. At Appollo National Public School, we hold firmly to this belief, that education must prepare children not just for examinations, but for life itself.

In a world that is constantly evolving, schools must do more than transmit information. They must cultivate thinking minds, compassionate hearts, and resilient spirits. At ANPS, learning is consciously designed to move beyond the confines of textbooks and classrooms into experiences that spark curiosity, strengthen values, and build real-world understanding. Through leadership opportunities, cultural immersion, community engagement, sports, and experiential learning, every child is encouraged to discover not only what they can achieve, but who they can become.

What gives me immense confidence is not only what our students achieve, but how they achieve it. The pages of this newsletter reflect a vibrant school ecosystem where integrity, responsibility, empathy, sustainability, and respect are not taught as abstract concepts, but lived every day, through action, dialogue, and reflection. Our teachers serve not merely as instructors, but as mentors and facilitators of growth. Our parents are not spectators, but active partners in this shared journey. Together, we are building a learning community grounded in trust and purpose.

Leadership, to me, is about creating environments where individuals are empowered to think independently, act ethically, and contribute meaningfully. At ANPS, we strive to foster such an environment, one where children learn to ask the right questions, take ownership of their learning, and remain rooted in values while striving for excellence.

As you read through ANPS Vox, I invite you to look beyond the events and achievements, and sense the deeper intent that runs through them all: our unwavering commitment to shaping thoughtful individuals who engage with the world not just with skill, but with character and conscience.

Together, let us continue this journey of learning with clarity, courage, and compassion; always remembering that when education is guided by values and vision, it has the power to transform not just individual lives, but society at large.

With warm regards,

Student Enrichment Activities

The school continues to place strong emphasis on student enrichment through a series of thoughtfully planned activities conducted across the academic term. Onam: 'Celebrating Harvest, Heritage and Harmony'

Onam celebrations on campus echoed the spirit of joy, harmony and cultural richness associated with the harvest festival and traditions associated with Kerala. A carefully arranged pookalam added colour and elegance to the setting, symbolising prosperity and togetherness.

Teachers and students participated in the lighting of the traditional lamp signifying reverence and the spirit of the festival. The observance provided students with an opportunity to connect with cultural traditions and understand their deeper significance, making the celebrations an elite combination of colours, culture and community as a true spirit.

'Winds of Liberty; Flames of Patriotism'

Independence Day was observed with solemn pride and patriotic fervour on campus, reflecting the enduring values of freedom, unity, and responsibility. The programme commenced with the hoisting of the National Flag by our honourable Principal, Dr. Vedavathi B.A., followed by the resonant strains of the National Anthem, creating a moment of collective reverence and reflection.

Through respectful participation and thoughtful engagement, students were encouraged to reflect on the meaning of independence—not merely as a historical milestone, but as a living commitment to integrity, equality and service to the nation. The celebration reaffirmed the belief that true patriotism is expressed through conscious action, civic responsibility and respect for the ideals enshrined in the Constitution.

When the Lamp Was Lit ; a musical note from the flute called HIM – HARE KRISHNA!

As the lamp was gently lit, the spirit of Krishna Janmashtami quietly unfolded across the campus in serene reverence. The ceremonial lighting of the lamp became more than a ritual, a moment of awakening and inner discipline into one's heart.

The celebration encouraged students to reflect on the timeless values embodied by Lord Krishna—dharma, compassion and mindful action. In that single flame glimmered the festival's larger meaning of duty, determination, dedication and devotion.

The observance left the campus suffused with calm and thoughtful reflection, a gentle reminder that His benevolence continues to guide thought and character.

'When Words Become Roots, Our Dignity Blossoms'

Hindi Diwas was observed as a quiet celebration of language and legacy. Through verse, voice, and expression, students engaged with Hindi not merely as a subject, but as a living thread that binds thought, emotion, and tradition.

Poetry and narration revealed the musicality of the language, while dramatized moments brought its cultural richness into focus. Each expression became a reminder that Hindi carries more than meaning—it carries memory, identity and shared heritage.

The observance encouraged students to appreciate language as a unifying force, one that bridges regions and generations. It was less a celebration of the day and more a reaffirmation of respect for a language that continues to shape collective consciousness.

The Inner Compass

Nurturing emotional strength and resilient relationships

In a world that often tests patience, empathy and self-belief, values emerge as a quiet yet powerful force. They shape how young minds respond to challenges, build relationships and understand themselves.

As part of this ongoing focus on emotional wellbeing, Grade 8 students engaged in a reflective session on resilient relationships. Through guided conversations and thoughtful activities, students explored themes of self-awareness, empathy, communication and emotional balance - skills that extend far beyond the classroom.

The interaction encouraged students to pause, reflect and recognize that emotional strength is not about being unshaken, but about learning how to respond with clarity and compassion. Such experiences nurture resilience from within, helping students grow into confident individuals who value connection, respect and inner balance.

The Quiet Brilliance Within:

Festivals offer more than moments of joy—they invite reflection. During the Diwali observance, attention turned inward, reminding students that the true essence of celebration lies in values that guide thought and action.

Through simple yet meaningful engagements, students explored ideas of respect, empathy and responsibility, discovering how these qualities shape both individual growth and collective harmony. The celebration became a gentle lesson in balance—honouring tradition while understanding its deeper significance.

The experience reaffirmed that education is not confined to academics alone. When learning nurtures character alongside knowledge, it prepares young minds to carry light not just during festivals, but through everyday choices.

Learning Beneath The Surface: The Aquarium

A visit to the Aquarium at Cubbon Park offered students a close look at life beneath the waterline. As they moved from tank to tank, curiosity replaced textbooks and observation became the lesson.

The experience encouraged students to notice patterns, habitats, and the delicate balance that sustains aquatic life. What began as a field visit gradually unfolded into a quiet exercise in awareness—linking classroom concepts with real-world ecosystems.

The outing left students with more than facts. It nurtured curiosity, respect for living systems and an understanding that learning often deepens when it begins with seeing, questioning and reflecting.

Yugaantara: A Festival of Transience and Discovery

Yugaantara unfolded as a celebration of fleeting moments that spark curiosity and ignite creativity. For a few vibrant days, the campus became a living canvas where ideas, imagination, and innovation converged, while they prepared, practiced, projected forging one more step.

Through Impressions 2025, students showcased projects across science, robotics, literature, art, technology, and sustainable farming. Each exhibit was a moment suspended in time—a demonstration of inquiry, experimentation and the joy of hands-on learning. Cultural performances and interactive stalls added rhythm and energy, inviting visitors to engage, explore, and reflect.

The event was a reminder that learning is not static. Knowledge, creativity and inspiration often arise in brief, ephemeral moments—moments that leave lasting impressions far beyond the exhibition itself. Yugaantara celebrated these transitory sparks of discovery, reinforcing that education is not just about outcomes, but about experiences that nurture curiosity, critical thinking, and a lifelong love for exploration.

'Cultivating Roots, Growing Minds in the heaven of Haven'

Hortico Haven has become a living classroom on campus, where students explore the rhythms of nature and the cycles of growth firsthand. Here, hands-on gardening allows children to observe how a tiny seed transforms into a thriving plant, nurturing patience, care and responsibility along the way.

Beyond cultivation, the space offers quiet moments for reflection and connection—with the environment and with one another. Students learn that growth is gradual, resilience is cultivated and small acts of care can yield lasting rewards. Hortico Haven stands as a testament to experiential learning, showing that education flourishes when the little hands that watered the green grass learnt the essence of growth.

My Voice, My Power

Public Speaking – Young Voices, Strong Impact

Each time our students take the stage, their words become more than sounds—they become instruments of thought, courage and inspiration. Public speaking is helping learners discover clarity, creativity and confidence and instilling the ability to engage and motivate others. An open platform to fill the space with thoughtful POVs.

The progress they demonstrate reflects dedication, practice and a supportive environment that encourages exploration and expression. Beyond fluency, these young voices embody leadership and empathy, showing that when students speak with conviction, they not only share ideas—they shape their world.
